ITTAMAR BEN AVI

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

The son of Ben Yehudah, who is regarded as the father of modern Hebrew, a Palestinian by birth, a European by education, a brilliant speaker and a charming personality, Ittamar Ben Avi will be the guest of Toronto Jewry this coming week-end. Ittamar Ben Avi is the editor of Dor Hayom, a Hebrew daily in Jerusalem. He is noted as an independent thinker. He has never been a part of the Zionist machine. During the Mack-Wise-Brandeis Zionist split, Ben Avi sided with the rebels. We met him a few years ago when he visited the United States in the interests of the Palestine Development Council. We look forward to the opportunity not only of renewing our acquaintance with him, but of hearing an unvarnished account of the latest developments in Palestine.

SIR MORTIMER DAVIS

We never knew Canadá's first, only and perhaps last Jewish knight. But we did hear that he was generous, that he never refused a request for financial help, and we do know that the new Y.M.H.A. in Montreal will long bear testimony to his generosity. Sir Mortimer undoubtedly made many good investments in a long and successful business career. But this $250,000 gift for a Y.M.H.A. in Montreal was the best he ever made. The fruit of his other investments may be frittered away, may be spent in cheap dance halls, in sensuous dissipation, in extravagant debaucheries. But the $250,000 spent on the "Y" will be a source of recreation and elevation to the Montreal Jewish youth. It will mean finer Jewish citizens, stronger physiques, better intellects, nobler characters. It was Sir Mortimer's best investment.

Details of his will have not been published. Nowadays the wills of wealthy men are of legitimate interest to the public. For immense wealth offers great opportunities for service and carries with it great responsibilities. We hope that Sir Mortimer made some bequests that will be an example for other men of means. We cannot stress too much the importance of making a will properly. A poorly thought out will may do much social damage. The late Marcus Loew left a fortune estimated at $100,000,000 and left nothing to charity. That did not add to his fame, nor can his family use his tremendous fortune. In fact it is apt to be abused.

To Montreal Jewry Sir Mortimer's death is a distinct loss as his generosity was a stimulus to its communal development. We hope that more men would learn to give in their life-time, and have the joy of witnessing increased opportunities in their communities, opportunities which their generosity made possible. Sir Mortimer Davis' Y.M.H.A. in Montreal will stand as a monument to his generosity and a challenge to other wealthy Canadian Jews.

A LIBERAL GIFT

Julius Rosenwald has contributed five million dollars to aid in the establishment of Jewish agricultural colonies in Russia. It is the largest gift made to any Jewish cause by an American Jew. Mr. Rosenwald's philanthropy has distinguished him among wealthy men. Not only to Jewish causes has he given assistance and lent his active support, but also to many civic, educational causes, irrespective of creed. We are especially pleased with his generosity towards the negroes, whose patron saint he is. Like the Jews the negroes are an oppressed group, denied social and educational opportunities, and we are glad to see that a successful Jew, who has suffered himself, can sympathize with the lot of the most unfortunate group of peoples on this continent. Mr. Rosenwald's munificence is exemplary.

NON-JEWISH ZIONISTS

From The American Jewish World

From time to time we read interesting accounts of the formation, in various lands, of "Pro-Palestine Committees." Largely through the efforts of Nahum Sokolow, groups of influential non-Jewish statesmen, scholars and men of affairs in England, France, Germany, Austria, and Italy have organized themselves into Pro-Palestine committees in their respective lands. The purpose of the organizations is to aid in every way possible the Jewish venture in Palestine.

It is interesting to analyze the reasons that prompt these great Gentile friends of Zion to aid the Jewish cause. Some of them do so from a sense of justice, an effort in some way and to some extent, to right the wrongs done the Jew by a Christian world. Others, devout students of the Bible, see in Jewish resettlement in Palestine the fulfilment of prophecy. Others, still, see the need of erecting a bridge between the Orient and the Occident and see in the Jew the best medium for such a span of understanding and amity, for the Jew combines the qualities of both Orient and Occident. Whatever the cause that prompts statesmen and publicists to aid the upbuilding of Palestine, the effect is bound to be entirely wholesome.

For the project of a Jewish Palestine requires the co-operation of Jew and non-Jew. While the "sinews," the financial support, must come largely from the Jew, enlightened interest and friendship must be forthcoming also from the non-Jew. Palestine's upbuilding being, in more ways than one, an international matter, there must be approval and aid from many nations. The good will alone that may accrue from Pro-Palestine Committees will help the Jews in many directions. Some Jews there are who, unfortunately, wait for the approval of the non-Jew even in strictly Jewish matters before they do their full duty. And they will the sooner help their Zionist fellow-Jews if they know that the world's men of affairs look with approval upon such work. More important is the benefit non-Jewish interest can work in and for Palestine itself. More concessions, entirely legitimate and to be expected, will be given in Palestine, in the form of crown-lands, a greater share of government subsidy and a more friendly attitude in diverse directions, if it is known that aid and comfort to the Jewish endeavours is the wish not only of Jewish friends of the rebuilding but also of the leaders of world public opinion.

Nahum Sokolow has long since been styled the diplomat of Zionism. His fine personal address, his linguistic ability, his scholarship and his splendid grasp of world policies and understanding of world movements, make him the man for establishing contacts and winning friends for Palestine among the non-Jews. The increase and the growth of Pro-Palestine groups and the approval that meets his efforts on every hand, is not the smallest tribute to the work of this veteran Zionist leader for regaining the land of his fathers for his brethren.

LIBRARY RAISES $5,000

Five thousand dollars was contributed Wednesday evening, March 21, at a banquet given by S. Wexler and N. Dr. Chaim Zhitlovsky, Yiddish lecturer, and Reuben Brainin, Hebrew author, gave addresses. Reuben Brainin, honorary president of the Library, who with Dr. Yehuda Kaufman was the original founder of the Institution, related his experiences in the founding of the Library. I. Rabinovitch, chairman of the Library Board, in introducing the speakers, stressed the inadequate quarters of the Library and spoke of the large increase in its circle of readers. S. Prof. C. E. Kellog spoke to the Parents' Association, Monday evening, March 26, of the changes that were being brought into public school education through studies by psychologists. He gave illustrations of the waste of time and energy in the curriculum and systems of the public schools. In answering questions he pointed out the absolute necessity of grading all children in divisions according to mental level and not age. He advocated the use of the direct method in teaching a foreign language and in teaching it sufficiently well to stimulate love for its literature. Louis Solomon, who presided, submitted a report of the fathers' and sons' banquet recently held under the auspices of the Parents' Association. A mothers' and daughters' banquet or tea will be held soon after Pesach.

SIR MORTIMER B. DAVIS

It is difficult at this hour to pay adequate tribute to the personality, Sir Mortimer. The sense of loss is too sharp and too overwhelming. Without doubt, Sir Mortimer was one of the outstanding philanthropists of Canada and the greatest in Canadian Jewry. He gave to all—no matter of what creed or faith. But especially did he give generously and without ostentation to the Jewish community. In last years, Sir Mortimer did not participate actively in the Jewish community life. He was hardly for any length of time in Montreal. He resided in France. But at all times his heart was bound up with the Jewish people. The love for Jewry came to him by inheritance. He was blessed with parents who were more than devoted to Judaism. The elders of Jewish Montreal cherish the name of Samuel Davis. It was Samuel, the father of Sir Mortimer, who helped lay the foundations of many communal institutions. He was one of the pioneers of the Reform Movement in Canada and served as President of Temple Emanu-El for many years. Sir Mortimer followed in the footsteps of a great father. He identified himself with all Jewish organizations. At one time he served as Vice-President of Temple Emanu-El and when death overtook him he held the office of honourary trustee. Sir Mortimer's sudden and untimely death will be mourned by every Jew. His passing away will be felt particularly now when so many plans are at hand for a greater and better institutionalized Jewish Montreal. All honour to his memory.

CONGREGATION MOURNS

Immediately after the news was flashed across the Atlantic from Cannes, France, that Sir Mortimer died, the Board of Trustees of Emanu-El passed the following resolution:

"The Members of the Board of Trustees of Temple Emanu-El have learned with profound sorrow of the sudden death of Sir Mortimer B. Davis, Honourary Trustee and life-long member of the Congregation and generous benefactor of our Community.

"From the inception of Temple Emanu-El (of which his respected father, the late Samuel Davis, was a Charter Member and for many years President) and throughout its existence, Sir Mortimer has always been a generous, enthusiastic and loyal supporter of the Congregation. His advice and means were always at its disposal and his interest in the progress of our institution was made manifest on many occasions.

"Be it therefore resolved, that we record the sense of great loss which our Congregation has sustained in his demise and desire to express to Lady Davis and Mr. Mortimer Davis our deepest sympathy in their great bereavement.

"Be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the family of the deceased and to the Press."

"DISRAELI"

Andre Maurois, eminent French student of nineteenth century England, is responsible for a most recent biography of Disraeli. He pictures Disraeli as an oriental adventurer in Victorian England. Maurois in reality makes no new discoveries about the Disraeli legend. But it is a worth-while volume written in a delightful style and most entertaining manner. The very last paragraph summons up the thesis of the author: "No, Disraeli was far from being a saint. But, perhaps, as some old Spirit of Spring, ever vanquished and ever alive, and as a symbol of what can be accomplished, in a cold and hostile universe, by a long youthfulness of heart."

STOP COMMERCIALIZING JUDAISM

A prominent non-Jew, connected with a large food-selling organization, complained bitterly about certain orthodox rabbis demanding large sums for Passover "Hechsherim" (Kosher permits). He informed us that there is "bargaining" connected with the obtaining of a "Kosher Le-Pesach" stamp from rabbis. If this be true, then we are sorry for such state of affairs. Why commercialize Judaism? And then the non-Jew can't understand the sacredness of the "Kosher stamp" when it is handled merely as a matter of business. Is there no way of stopping such a commercializing of Yiddeshkeit? It is not in accordance with Jewish dignity and Jewish ethics. It isn't Kosher.

YOUNG ISRAEL PRESENTS NOVELIST HERE

Louis Golding, English novelist, poet and traveller, who was brought to America last November on a lecture tour by the Menorah and the Zionist Organization of America, lectured Thursday night, March 29, at Annex Hall, under the auspices of Young Israel. He gave an illustrated lecture on "Jewish Wanderer in Strange Lands." Committee: Cecelia Boness, Harry Darabaner, Ralph Zabetsky and Mrs. Lillie Richler.

Louis Golding was born in Manchester, England, in 1895. From the time he was twelve until he was graduated from Oxford, Golding supported himself by scholarships. When the war broke out, he left Queen's College, Oxford, to go to Macedonia with the English troops, but returned after the hostilities were over, to finish his course. While he was at college he was one of the editors of the Oxford Book of Verse, and conducted the "Queen's College Miscellany," an undergraduate magazine. His first volume of verse, "Sorrows of War," and his first novel, "Forward from Babylon," both appeared while he was at Oxford. His books show flexibility of style and diversity of mood. "Forward from Babylon" is a sombre novel with a quality comparable to that of a Rembrandt canvas; "Seacoast of Bohemia" is a satirical fantasy—amusing and frivolous; "Sunward" is sensitive and entertaining, written in a gay and careless mood; "Shrinking Woods" is a collection of imaginative essays. "Day of Atonement" goes back to the sombre mood of "Forward from Babylon," except that this mood is intensified. "The New York Times" called the book "the tragedy of Jewry," and said that "it shows how from the present agony there emerges a new Jew, in quest of a warmer and more genial creed than the stern and gloomy regime set the Hebrew by the tenets of his stubborn ritual." In his next novel, "Store of Ladies," Mr. Golding once more satirizes the foibles of society.

His new novel, "The Miracle Boy," is his most ambitious work. It was written while he was living in the chalet of Prinzessin von Chervadsky, in the Tyrol, and is about a young Tyrolean peasant gifted with a strange psychic power. The husband of the Prinzessin, Herbert Gurschner, who made the woodcuts illustrating "The Miracle Boy," springs from a Tyrolese peasant family.

Mr. Golding spends the greater part of each year travelling into far places, the scenes of which produce the backgrounds for his books. He wrote "Seacoast of Bohemia" in Capri, where he made the acquaintance of his chief friends, G. B. Stern, Francis Brett Young, and Rebecca West. A tour from the Alps to Messina down the length of Italy resulted in "Sunward"; and an exploration of remote villages and remoter islands produced "Sicilian Noon." He completed "Store of Ladies" in Tunis and Djerba (Homer's Island of the Lotus-Eaters). After completing this, Mr. Golding went on a holiday to Palestine, where he wandered leisurely along the Palestinian seacoast and the Jordan valley.

OUR PALESTINE

By Reuben Goodman, Young Zionists Juniors

Where do all the Jews belong?
Why is there sorrow in their song?
Where is the land of honey and wine?
It shall never be lost, our Palestine.

I'll climb and climb ever so high,
Until I'll reach to Mount Sinai;
There we will see over trees so fine,
When we will reach our dear Palestine.

FALSE MESSIAHS

By Estelle Litovitz, Sarah Girls; Freda Schleser, Leader

Messiahs are persons who claim to be the deliverers of Israel divinely appointed to bring about the establishment of the promised Messiah Kingdom. Most of these men who arose at various times were imposters seeking to make use (for selfish purposes) of the innocent faith of the masses, other victims of their own beliefs. All of them had as their goal the restoration of Israel to its native land. Some sought this through fasting and praying and looking forward to miracles to assist them, others appealed to arms. In connection with the Messianic role some took the part of religious performers introducing new customs and even trying to overthrow the existing Judaism.

The effects of the Messianic movements were wicked. Many of them lost their lives in a source of their activities. They misled the people with false hopes and even led many from Judaism.

These Messiahs first began to appear when Rome commenced to crush the independence of Judaea.

In the first century there were a few Messiahs who promised the people reliefs from the Roman yoke. They destroyed the peace of the city and pretended that God would show them signs of liberty.

Theudas was one of these who urged the people to the Jordan where he would divide them. Many of his followers were slain by a band of horsemen.

Another is an Egyptian who gathered 30,000 people to Mount of Olives opposite Jerusalem, promising them that the walls of the city would fall down enabling them to enter and take possession of the city. Another, Felix, the procurator, met the throng with soldiery.

With the destruction of the temple, the appearance of Messiahs ceased for a time until sixty years later when a political movement of large proportions took place with Simon Bar Kochba at its head. For two and a half years he flourished as Messiah-king and after stirring up a war that taxed the power of Rome, he met his death at Bethar.

A few centuries later there appeared a man who called himself Moses. He said that he would deliver the people dry-shod through the sea (as did the ancient Moses) back to Palestine, but the sea did not separate so that many of the people were drowned.

The last Messiah lived towards the end of the eighth century, declared himself to be a prophet and was by his disciples regarded as Messiah. He wanted the people to fast and pray.

The orthodox Jews are still looking for the coming of the Messiah, the great king of the line of David. The coming of Messiah will be the universal acceptance and world-wide domination of Jewish ideas and religion.

THE ARABIANS WON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO

By B. Smith, Young Zionists Juniors

The Jews are still behind,
Although we are not blind.
But when the Arabians
Will come in to fight
With their lordly crew,
Oh! then we'll know what to do.

We'll rush the Arabians and fight,
We'll know what's right,
We'll take a better height.

We'll be good and true,
We'll have a lordly crew,
The Arabians won't know what to do.

OLD PALESTINE

By B. Smith

Old Palestine is still good and fine,
She's an old friend of mine.
I am still young,
But I long to hear the Hebrew tongue.
But when I hear, it makes me fear,
That I can't come back to Palestine,
But when I will grow old,
I will try and be bold.
I'll try and I'll try
To climb the mountains high,
Until I come to Mount Sinai.
When I come to Palestine,
I'll do my duty, I'll do it fine.
I'll fight for the Zionists,
With both my head and my fists.
I'll give the Jews a better height,
I'll fight for everything that's right.

THE ORIGIN OF PURIM

By Rivka Harnick, Szold Girls; Miss Rosen, Leader

At the court of Ahasverus, King of Persia, much excitement prevailed. A feast was announced to be held for seven days, and the nobility and other people of prominence were invited from all over the one hundred and twenty-seven provinces over which Ahasverus ruled, to come and take part in this sumptuous repast.

There were wines of the finest brands and most palatable tastes, and each of the guests was privileged to enjoy himself according to desire.

Little of any political events was discussed there and less of the improvement of governmental affairs. Each and every one was giving himself wholly to pleasure and joy; each and every one was doing full justice to the wine glasses, which were filled by the butlers from time to time.

On or about the third day of this joyful entertainment, when sober-thinking gave way to alcoholic influence; when the mind could no more discern between right and wrong and the hearts could no more indulge in passions and appetites, Ahasverus, who even in his sober frame of mind was considered devoid of reason and intelligence, chose the very interesting subject for discussion, namely, as to feminine beauty.

All were permitted to take part in this discussion and so each one claimed and pretended to be a better judge of beauty of the fair sex.

Ahasverus, now in such state where the wine was his soul speaker, suggested to his guests that his queen was the most beautiful woman among them all, and to prove this he ordered her through one of his lieutenants to appear before him and his guests. But the way in which he commanded her to appear was much below the dignity of even any ordinary woman . . . not to speak of a queen, and it was repulsive to her nature to follow such command.

Upon her definite refusal to appear, one of the king's advisers suggested that Vashti be dismissed as the Queen of Persia, and that invitations should be sent out all through the country to every beautiful looking girl who should report to one of the king's ministers appointed for this purpose and that girl who will meet with the best approval of the king shall take Queen Vashti's place. This advice was favourably accepted and it was ordered that same be carried into effect.

Among the countless young ladies who registered with this executor, there was also a young Jewish girl named Esther who had been brought up and raised by her uncle, Mordecai.

When Esther was prepared and appeared before the king, he was more favourably impressed with her beauty and charm than with any of the others, and so Esther was chosen as the queen to take Vashti's place.

On one occasion Esther's uncle, Mordecai, who used to visit her daily, overheard a conversation between two of Ahasverus' butlers, plotting to poison the king's food. Mordecai thereupon conveyed this to his niece, who again reported those butlers' intentions to the king. This occurrence was put into the Book of Chronicles and kept on record.

The king's premier at this time named Haman, was always hostilely inclined towards the Jewish people, and his hostility was particularly pronounced when he noticed that Mordecai never bowed nor even greeted him when he passed.

Prompted by hatred and grudge, Haman approached the king with the unfriendly and evil suggestion that as there is a race living scattered all over the Persian countries who do not obey the laws nor observe the customs and habits of Persia, that the king should give him the authority in consideration of a large sum of money to be added to the king's treasury that he may exterminate this race from the king's countries.

This king who never had the governmental reins in his own hands easily yielded to this ill-fated request.

Haman announced his cruel intention all through the provinces and when it came that Mordecai learned of same, he informed Esther of this and asked her to appeal to the king that he may prevent this inhuman order. Mordecai pointed out to Esther that it might be for that purpose only that she was chosen queen.

Esther lost no time, advised the king of Haman's plan which he intended to carry out and asked for merciful intervention.

Again the king yielded and the cruel order was cancelled.

When the king learned that his life had been saved through the kind participation of Mordecai and that Haman his bitter antagonist had prepared a gallows for Mordecai he ordered that Haman and his ten sons be put through the punishment intended for Mordecai and thus it was carried out.

As this happened on the thirteenth day of the Hebrew month of Adar in the year 3404, the Jewish people all over the world are commemorating this event by celebrating with presents and good will to each other and gifts to the poor.

THE JEWISH NATIONAL FUND

By Anne Heller, Sara Girls Circle, Upper Intermediates

The Jewish National Fund was decided upon by Professor Schapira. The object of this fund is to acquire land in Palestine and the neighbouring countries, which is to be the permanent property of the Jewish people. To assist the work of colonization the manager has considered it his duty to promote any undertaking of service in Palestine.

One of the most important sections is the Olive Tree Fund. This fund tries to provide many Jewish families with employment and they also supply ways of maintaining Jewish educational institutions.

Another department is the Land Donation Fund. Through this fund every Jew has an opportunity of purchasing a dunam of land in Palestine, in his own name and then presenting it to the fund.

The directorates have established collecting agencies all over the world. The collection best adopted is the collection by means of boxes. This box is put on the wall of every Jewish home and the money is collected at least twice a year. Another way of collection is by means of stamps used on letters, invitations and cards for New Year's greetings.

Two achievements of the fund are that a farm was erected and some Jewish people now find employment and are trained as farmers, and that the Jewish National Fund has granted loans to improve the hygienic conditions of the homes and dwellings.

The Jewish National Fund reaches a sum of about £120,000. Although it is still a small amount, they hope in time it will develop so great that the Jewish people will be able to have land and freedom of their own.

WHY I AM A YOUNG JUDAEAN

By Cecillian Blumin, Flowers of Zion Juniors; Leader, Toba Pollack

My friend and I came to the decision that we would start to a Young Judaean Circle. Young Judaea has existed for a number of years. Every member of this wonderful organization is taught Zionism and something about their own religion and country.

Young Judaean members take a greater interest in affairs in Palestine than they otherwise would.

Periodically Young Judaean members are given the opportunity to contribute towards the building of Palestine mainly through the Keren Hayesod and the National Fund. This creates a spirit of nationalism within the heart of every Young Judaean.

Here we are taught to speak before an audience. Young Judaea provides inter-circle debates for championship. In this club we come in contact with girls of other circles.

We also learn many songs. I had never before known why we light candles Friday night, why we eat matzoh on Pesach, and why we keep these holidays. It also makes me feel proud to be a Jew.

Our nation is spread all over the world and now we hope to find a great Jewish educational centre in Palestine.

Don't you think it well worth being a Young Judaean? I do.

WHY AND FOR WHAT REASON WE ORGANIZED THIS CLUB

By Malachi Orlove, President Young Zionists Juniors

Does any one know why we have organized this club? Well, I'll tell you why. Every one knows that the Arabs have possession of Palestine, and we want to regain it because it is our promised land. It was promised to our ancestors, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. It is the land of our fathers, the land that flows milk and honey. Now how will we regain it? Every person would say buy land. That's wrong, we don't need so much bare land, we want orchards, farms, etc., and everything that should make Palestine a real country flowing milk and honey. We need not worry how to make Palestine be a country that flows milk and boney. If you want to do something send in how much money you can bring that'll pay for the planting of trees and other things. We can get enough money to make our own orchard.

Every Friday

The report of the Jewish Agricultural Society of the United States, recently issued, shows that from the year 1900 to 1928 the Jewish farm population grew from 1,000 to 80,000 persons. Jews are farming one million acres and their actual holdings, including land and property, are valued at more than one hundred and fifty million dollars. It took twenty-eight years then, much money and great effort to place these 80,000 people on the land, out in the wide open spaces where the air is sweet with clover sometimes and where there is absolutely no congestion, none. Eighty thousand people mean about 15,000 families and while these statistics may bring cheer and encouragement to the hearts of those interested in the work of the Jewish Agricultural Society and forecast a rosy future it is hard to see how an outsider can go into raptures.

Without quoting the figures the Jewish Exponent of Philadelphia deduces from the Agricultural Society's report that "without trumpet shouts, without drives or campaigns, with virtually no assistance whatever the Jew of America is going back to the soil—returning in a fine, wholesome, dignified way, unusually fast. Should he continue at this rate the American Jewish farmer will do more than redeem his urban brother, the target for so much criticism in recent years. Almost without notice this most interesting phenomenon in the life of the American Jewish community is taking place. Were it not for the annual report of the Jewish Agricultural Society just made public, this change in the complexion of the American Jewish community would have remained unnoticed."

This is the usual patter on the subject. However, examination of the figures must indicate the reluctance of the Jews as a rule to forsake city life. Is it logical to expect that adult Jews from cities will hanker for a return to the land when non-Jewish farm boys born there don't want to stay? Should the Jews be different just because many are immigrants? Being human, some will always want to farm as some non-Jews will always want to farm. But in urging them to go on farms their rare gift for stimulating commerce need not be so overlooked as to make them appear inferior unless they do go on farms to live.

The Jewish Agricultural Society, with all the best arguments in the world on tap, evidently has had no soft job selling the idea of Jews being farmers. There are many writers and speakers, city dwellers, of course, very willing to help the Society by urging other city-dwellers to go away to Mother Earth and there commune with Nature. In the enchantment that distance lends they rave about the country where the great bowl of the sky can be seen all of the time, where the milk comes fresh and warm from the kindly cow and there is none of the noise and fever of the cities, where houses are roomier and disease less prevalent, where business competition is not so keen, etc., etc., etc. But they are talking chiefly to the gallery as far as effect is concerned.

The truth is, all the city-bred farm-talkers to the contrary notwithstanding, Jews are not as awfully keen on seeing the great bowl of the sky winter and summer as are more accustomed phlegmatic other people. Their temperament calls for something different. Is it a sin to say so? The Jews are city-dwellers and builders and they are necessary to the life of trade. The most enthusiastic Jewish and non-Jewish propagandists are those with a garage in the yard of a house a block or so from the street car and they therefore hypnotize few. Most Jews are content with pasteurized milk, a glass bottle in lieu of cow. For all they care their acquaintance with chicken can be limited to what it looks like when ready to serve and twittering birds can be canaries. The Jew has great enough gifts for any country without those he can drag up from the soil and his orators and politicians need not make him feel cheap and apologetic because he can't play "follow the leader" behind a plow. Can they?

Some do prophesy darkly that it will be the Jew's undoing that he always wants to be where people are. He doesn't mind working with his hands in sweat if it can only be where others work and live close together. He also wants to make jazz tunes or direct film productions or be a lawyer or surgeon or boss the buttonhole makers or be a promoter or teach or preach or write or act or build great theatres in great cities, or stir about in the marts of trade; he wants to join the crowds in toil and play and be some place near colour and the white lights or places to argue or dance. Some Jews do want to dig in the soil and make the land bloom like a rose. Most of them don't. To settle the city-dwelling Jew in some farm house away from the bustle, the sights and smells he craves is to choke and yoke him with freedom, to cramp his style in miles of space and oceans of suffocating quiet. He may well say with the boy Walther in Schiller's "Wilhelm Tell": "Es wird mir eng in weiten Land." f.f.c.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

The issue of your esteemed journal of March 16, contained a somewhat lengthy editorial from Rabbi Isserman purporting to express his views on the subject of the recently formed, and flourishing, Jewish Organization known as The Hebrew Liberal League. The letter could hardly lay claim to originality, for, by the rather belated acknowledgment in its concluding portion, we feel justified in assuming that the thoughts expressed emanated from Mr. Louis Marshall rather than from Rabbi Isserman. In either case, we would suggest that the opinions are not those of one per cent. of the Jewish population of Toronto.

It is not our intention in this reply to show all the very adequate reasons why Rabbi Isserman is not the ideal person to air such views in a local journal, although, let it be said there is ample scope to do so. We prefer to content ourselves by outlining a few of the facts concerning the Hebrew Liberal League—facts which, judging by the Rabbi's remarks, he has not taken the trouble to make himself cognisant of before breaking out into journalism.

To this end, we ask you to be good enough to publish the following extracts from the Constitution of the League:

(1) To organize and unite for cultural development, communal and social intercourse, Hebrew citizens of the City of Toronto and environs.

(2) To discuss financial, industrial, economic, communal and social questions.

(3) To aid in the development of political thought by promoting the knowledge of Liberal principles and Liberal policies.

(4) To organize Hebrew citizens of Toronto, for both Federal and Provincial purposes; to disseminate principles of liberalism and liberal policies among the Hebrew citizens of Toronto.

(5) To teach the principles of good citizenship and promote the knowledge and study of Canadian history and Canadian ideals, and, in a general way, to assist in the development of a Canadian spirit and a Canadian idealism.

(6) To expound and promote all such policies and measures tending to the establishment of an harmonious relationship between the Hebrew and other citizens in this province and country and between all classes therein.

(7) To express as an organized body the Liberal point of view in questions coming before the public or the Legislature, specifically affecting the interests of the Hebrew citizens in the province and country.

We feel we are justified in our belief that the above aims are modelled along the lines of true Liberalism. It is also our belief that every Jew is sensitive, and sensible enough to appreciate that a certain antipathy still exists, and is exhibited, towards the Jews as a race. The contention is therefore made that, rather than sacrifice wholly the opportunity of organizing with other bodies, it is preferable to maintain a society of their own making, peopled and controlled by the Jewish fraternity and run, not for the benefit of Jews only, but for the benefit of Liberalism as a whole.

Rabbi Isserman also touched upon the subject of the League being run for the purpose of filling the pockets of a certain few. Here again we would seriously suggest that he should delve into the true facts rather than indulge in flights of imagination. It is possible that the Rabbi is unaware of the names of, and the type of, citizens behind the organization. It is more than probable that he is unaware how far these citizens (far from viewing the formation of such a body as a source of personal gain), have given, instintingly of their time, labour and money. If Rabbi Isserman needs assurance that there are still men who are sufficiently personally disinterested that they are willing to give of their best for the benefit of a common cause, the facts alluded to will gladly be furnished to him.

LOUIS FINE,
President, Hebrew Liberal League.

Sir Mortimer Davis Dies at Cannes

While at Cannes for his health, Sir Mortimer Davis, Canadian tobacco magnate, of Montreal, died Thursday, March 22. Sir Mortimer, who was president of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, was 62 years old. He was born in Montreal. He was chairman of the boards of the Industrial Alcohol Company and the Consolidated Asbestos Corporation and director of several industrial and financial organizations, including the United States Rubber Company, the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, the Royal Bank of Canada, and the Crown Trust Company. Sir Mortimer was also an active sportsman, owning several race horses which have won important stakes on the American and European turf. He was a member of the Mount Royal and Royal Montreal Golf Clubs, the Forest and Stream Club, the St. Lawrence Yacht Club, the St. James Club, and the Mount Bruno Country Club, of Montreal. It was stated by Lord Shaughnessy, representative of Sir Mortimer Davis in Montreal, that Sir Mortimer's son, who was recently in Montreal with his wife, formerly Rozika Dolly, well-known dancer, was now on his way back to France on the SS. Aquitania. Owing to failing health, Sir Mortimer had made his home in France, and had practically severed his active connection with business affairs in Canada. Lord Shaughnessy stated that arrangements would be made immediately to have the body brought to Montreal for burial. Sir Mortimer Barnett Davis, Knight Bachelor, president of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Ltd., was born in 1866. He attended public schools in Montreal. When 21 years of age, he became prominent in financial circles of the city and it is to his work at that time that the Imperial Tobacco Company owed its origin. Sir Mortimer recognized the possibilities of tobacco growing in Canada and spent much time and money on experiments. Sir Mortimer found time to interest himself in charitable works and his bequests were notable for size and number. In 1926 he made a personal gift of $300,000 to the Young Men's Hebrew Association. His father, Samuel Davis, was well known in Montreal in the early seventies. The population then had not commenced to grow. Mr. Davis knew the value of advertising. The name made a profitable legacy for the Davis boys, when Samuel died. Sir Mortimer started out on his own with the Ritchie cigarette, but soon came the merger which was to prove the foundation of his fortune. Sir Mortimer was married twice, first to Miss Henriette Myers, and secondly, to the Countess Moroni. Miss Myers was from California. His second wife survives. He was president of the Baron de Hirsch Institute and founded a law chair at Laval University in 1903. Sir Mortimer was a member of the Montreal Board of Trade, of the Mount Royal Club, of St. James Club, of the Montreal Hunt Club and of the Montreal Jockey Club. He was a director of the Royal Montreal Golf Club and of the Montreal Horticultural and Fruit Growing Association.

"Would we give you a job?"

Would your amateur experience in your own basement laundry qualify you to operate a laundry such as this, do you think? Do you know how to make water soft? Do you know when soap is pure? Can you iron without rubbing? Do you know how hot each wash water should be — and how to keep it just the right temperature? We know without any guesswork, because we have science, and expensive equipment, at our disposal—and our results are better than home methods, and much cheaper. Phone to-day and let us explain our five different services.

LOEW'S

"Doomsday," the production which opens at Loew's next Monday, comes with an already assured reputation for entertainment. The picture is adapted from the novel of the same name by Warwick Deeping, author of "Sorrell and Son," and one of the best known of present day English novelists. "Doomsday" was a best seller in book form and created a sensation when it ran serially in McClure's magazine. It is a powerful problem love story containing every element to create suspense and maintain breathless interest. In adapting the novel for the screen Doris Anderson and Donald W. Lee retained all of the features that made the book so overwhelmingly popular. Florence Vidor has the starring role in the picture as Mary Viner, the girl who has known all of the drudgery of endless work and who seeks a way out of the treadmill of toil. Gary Cooper takes the part of Captain Arnold Furze, the world war veteran who finds work a salvation instead of a soul destroying grind. The scene of the story and picture is rural England, the country which Warwick Deeping knows so well.

Five big vaudeville acts will also be presented, featuring Earl Bronson and Irene Renee with the Cantor Girls.

But your memory will be cherished
In the hearts that loved you dear.
Sadly missed by Father, Mother, Brother and Sister.

Good-Will Meeting at Temple Emanu-el

The first goodwill meeting of its kind was held in Montreal when representatives of Roman Catholicism and Protestantism were guests of the Brotherhood of Temple Emanu-El at a banquet given in the Emanu-El hall, Sherbrooke Street West. The chairman, Dr. A. Bercovitch, president of the brotherhood, in introducing the first speaker, who, according to the programme, would have been the Rev. Father Thomas Heffernan, explained that he had been called suddenly out of town, and in his place the chairman presented Robert J. Hart.

Mr. Hart showed, as a Roman Catholic, his sentiments regarding the oneness of mankind in the essential things of life, and, speaking for his part, he told the meeting what he considered the attitude of the Roman Catholic Church to those of other persuasions. Every living soul, he said, no matter what is his faith, be it Jew, or Mohammedan, if he is trying to live in good faith, and is taking reasonable means to find out what is the right way of life, is an out and out member of the Catholic Church."

The Rev. W. J. Johnston, a minister of the United Church of Canada, told of the chasm which separates Jew and Gentile. The bridge across this gorge of suspicion and envy, he felt, was taking shape and becoming more and more apparent, and, especially during these last few years. Each part of his talk he represented as a bridge over the gulf: the first he called the bridge of goodwill; the second, friendship; and the third, brotherhood. He pleaded for a greater effort on the part of all concerned to forget the adverse qualities, which mankind is so wont to bring to the fore, and to concentrate the attention rather on the best elements of their particular race or creed.

The chairman explained, when Mr. Johnston brought his address to a close, that the third speaker was to have been Rabbi Julius Berger, but owing to illness he had been confined to his house and was, therefore, unable to be present. However, Rabbi Berger sent his message to add to the symposium, entitled "Tearing Down the Old Wall." In emphasizing the essential unity of mankind, he urged that deeds rather than thoughts or creed be the criterion. He said that were he a Christian, he would try to understand first the point of view of the Jew and others, to avoid the word "tolerate" and in its place use the more sympathetic word "appreciate," to look to their divine example to motivate their actions and thoughts, and finally to make allowance for the Jews, in virtue of what they have gone through. "Such are some of my ideals which I would endeavour to carry out into activity, if I were not what I am," his words ran. "In a word, my ideals would be the fulfilment of the truth contained in the following: 'Though divided in creed, we are united in deed'."

Performers from the Palace were sent through the courtesy of George Rotsky. Dr. Lyon Bercovitch tendered a vote of thanks to the entertainers.
